RESEARCH FINDINGS

Abigail Wisser and Alatheia Wisser Morse, sisters, were daughters of Benjamin Wisser Sr. and were members of the New Woodstock Baptist Church at an early date.

New Woodstock, New York, is located in the township of Cazenovia, and is seven miles south of Village of Cazenovia on New York State Route 13. Abigail joined the New Woodstock, Madison, NY Baptist Church in 1802 and was dismissed in 1821. Alatheia (spelled Eletheah in the original records) Morse, joined the New Woodstock Baptist Church in New Woodstock in 1804 and was dismissed in 1819.

We assume that Abigail and Alatheia were dismissed due to moving to another town (probably Truxton).

A good history of the Baptist Church is taken from the "History of Chenango and Madison Counties" by James H. Smith, published by D. Mason & Co. - Syracuse, NY - 1880

"CHURCHES. --- The First Baptist church in Cazenovia, at New Woodstock. --- The Baptists of this town were not much behind the Presbyterians in cultivating this religious field. Those who settled in the locality of New Woodstock were mostly active young men from Woodstock, Conn., and Brimfield, Mass. Among them were a few who had been members of Baptist churches in the East, and others who inclined to their sentiments. Soon after the arrival of Rev. Joshua Leonard, who was the first minister in the town, they were favored occasionally with preaching by Elder Nathan Baker, of Pompey, who was then a licentiate. In 1800 Elder James Bacon, from Torrington, Mass., came here, and through his efforts a church was organized. In December of this year a meeting was held at the house of Ebenezer Corbin for the purpose of organizing a monthly conference. The five persons who attended it agreed to meet monthly in conference, and also arranged to secure the services of Elder Bacon half of the time. March 18, 1801, they met according to appointment, and, says the record, "having conversed about articles, both as to doctrine and practice, found ourselves so far agreed that we voted to send for a council * * * to come and look into our standing." They then numbered ten, but during the spring six were added by baptism. These sixteen were fellowshipped by a council which convened at the house of Isaac Morse, June 17, 1801.

Their first pastor was Elder James Bacon, who was then far advanced in years, and soon felt constrained to relinquish the pastorate into younger hands by reason of age and infirmities. He died in 1812, aged 84. He was succeeded in the fall of 1804, by Rev. John Peck, who continued his labors with them thirty-one years. He was ordained by this church June 11, 1806. Two years previously (1802) a small log meeting-house has been built, but it soon became too small to accommodate the people. The church therefore united with the Presbyterians in this part of the town, and built a frame house thirty feet square. Each denomination was privileged to occupy it alternately half the time; but as no preacher was obtained by the Presbyterians, it was occupied all the time by the Baptists. By 1815, the church had outgrown this house, and in that year the foundation of a new one was laid. A larger edifice was soon after erected thereon. It was finished in 1816. In 1820 about half the members of this church withdrew to form the church in Cazenovia village.

Elder Peck resigned the pastorate in November, 1834, but continued his labors till the first Sunday in January, 1835...

The Baptist Church of Cazenovia. --- The earliest meetings preliminary to the organization of this church were held at the school-house two miles south of the village in 1803, and were conducted statedly by Elder Bacon, then pastor of the church at New Woodstock, to which the constituent members of this church belonged, and by his successors and others till 1813, when, greater accommodations being needed than the school-house afforded, they were transferred to the court house in the village, where they had previously been held occasionally; though the only Baptists living there were two females, both poor, and having intemperate husbands, until shortly before 1813, when Dea. N. S. Johnson, from Troy, took up his residence in the village. The meetings were continued in the Court house till 1817, when that building came into possession of the Methodists. In that year the foundation of a meeting house was laid and the superstructure erected upon it, and the following year was brought into condition for occupancy.

Up to this time, however, no separate organization existed. Sept. 6, 1820, ninety-one persons--thirty-six males and fifty-five females--were dismissed from "The Baptist Church of Christ," at New Woodstock, for the purpose of forming a church in Cazenovia village.

The church was destitute of a pastor about two years, but was supplied with preaching during this time principally by Elder Roswell Beckwith and their old pastor..."
